Right now, most people have to buy a monthly subscription for their Internet access. This means that, with some types of providers, you can't get free access anymore. With this in mind, Google has offered a Fiber-like Free WiFi service which is not limited to public Wi-Fi hotspots. If you want to use Google's Free public Wi-Fi service, all you have to do is head to a Google office or a designated public area. The remaining steps are pretty straightforward. In order to use Google's Free Wi-Fi service, you'll need to make sure that the network for which you want to connect is not being used. You can do this by going to the network's information page and checking to see what band the Wi-Fi router uses. Google's Free Wi-Fi service isn't limited to just Google offices. If you want to use the service, you'll need to have the Google Wi-Fi application on your phone. When you try to access an internet-enabled website, you'll be prompted to connect to a free public Wi-Fi network that you can locate by looking for the Google logo. If you're looking for a stable, reliable and fast Internet connection, it may be worth noting that Google's Free public Wi-Fi is not included with their G Suite, which includes Gmail, Google Docs and the Android and Chrome apps. The service is free, but there are limitations which include how long you can use the service and which of Google's other products you can access using the service. Also, you can only connect to a single public Wi-Fi network at a time, so if you need to get connected to another one, you'll have to get off the first network and connect to the second one.
