, I NEED HELP PLEASE!! In Vista, I have many temp files, all of which I want to remove. How do I go about this? I know some of the files have names like temp1.txt, so I tried using the command prompt: C:\WINDOWS\System32>xcopy %USERPROFILE%\Desktop\temp.files*.* S:\ It worked, but there were far too many files that it didn't work properly on all of them. I have some of the older temp files that I need to erase, so would a batch file be a good way of doing this? A: create a bat file using notepad which would be - @ECHO off del /q *temp1.txt *temp1.dmp *temp1.db *.xml *cleanedata.txt *.rpt *temp1_history.txt *.jpg *temp2.txt *.db *.txt * source this file by double clicking on it. It should delete the files without any error. for older file - @ECHO OFF FOR /R "C:\Users\a\Desktop\temp.files" %%a in (*.txt) DO (del "%%a") All temp files should be deleted as i have provided in second answer. The present invention relates to low-noise and low-distortion signal processing, and more specifically to time-sampling technologies for time-sampling and digital-to-analog conversion are based on analogue-to-digital conversion techniques, e.g. time-interleaving arrangements. This type of architecture is sensitive to system and component variations, and is inherently limited to digital sampling rates that are integer multiples of the clock frequency, and hence has an upper bound on the maximum speed with which the data can be sampled. The main disadvantage of an analogue-to-digital converter, however, is its large size and power consumption, which is essentially determined by the number of samples per clock period, and hence also by the maximum sampling frequency. If the resolution is increased, the precision becomes less accurate because of large quantization noise. It is possible to avoid the use of a sampling clock in a time-interleaving digital-to-analog converter and to sample the analog signal by means of an oscillator producing
